Provincial Diversity Project, 2014 [Canada]

Projet sur la diversité provinciale

Aperçu

Identification	cora-prov-diversity-E-2014
Résumé	The Provincial Diversity Project is a survey aimed at comparing public opinions realities across provinces on identity and attachment, views about federalism, attitudes toward ethnic diversity and immigration, as well as views on social, economic and political issues. The Provincial Diversity Project is led by Antoine Bilodeau (Concordia University) along with Luc Turgeon (Ottawa), Stephen E. White (Carleton) and Ailsa Henderson (Edinburgh). The Provincial Diversity Project survey was conducted in the winter of 2014 among close to 10,000 Canadians through an internet survey conducted by Léger Marketing. The Provincial Diversity Project survey includes three components. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A sample of 6400 Canadians stratified by province: 1000 respondents in each of Quebec, Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia; 500 Canadians in each of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Manitoba and Saskatchewan; and 400 Canadians in Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland and Labrador. [PROJ=2] • An oversample of visible minority Canadians stratified by province with about 400 respondents in each of Quebec, Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia.[PROJ=3] • An oversample of young Canadians (aged 18 to 34) stratified by region: 350 respondents in each of the following regions: the Atlantic, Ontario, the Prairies, and British Columbia, and 500 respondents in Quebec. [PROJ=1] The Provincial Diversity Project was realized with the support of Concordia University, the Secrétariat aux affaires intergouvernementales canadiennes du Québec, the Canadian Network for Research on Terrorism, Security and Society, the Institute for Research on Public Policy and the Chaire de recherche du Canada en études québécoises et canadiennes de l'UQAM.

Echantillonnage

Procédure d'échantillonnage

Visible Minority sample:
 Respondents were asked to identify their racial or ethnic group at the beginning of the survey questionnaire. If they considered themselves as white or aboriginals, they were excluded from this sample. Self-identification is not a perfect measure of whether someone truly is a member of a visible minority, but this remained the best screening method available for this research project.

Taux de réponse

A total of 9,948 Canadians were interviewed: 6,400 were randomly chosen among the general population; 1,901 were aged between 18 to 34 years; and 1,647 were members of visible minorities (self-identified).

General public respondents
Newfoundland and Labrador	250
Prince Edward Island	150
Nova Scotia	500
New Brunswick	500
Quebec	1,000
Ontario	1,000
Manitoba	500
Saskatchewan	500

WEIGHT1 = Weighting for 18-34 sample
 WEIGHT1A = Weighting 18-34 sample (provinces)
 WEIGHT2 = Weighting for general population sample
 WEIGHT2A = Weighting for general population sample (provinces)
 WEIGHT3 = Weighting for visible minorities sample
 WEIGHT3A = Weighting for visible minorities sample (provinces)

To rectify possible imbalances and render the sample representative of the entire adult population of Canada, raw data were weighted according to the actual distribution of the population based on the gender, age, mother tongue, and ethnicity (visible minorities or not) of Canadians. Regional imbalances created by the oversampling of smaller provinces were also corrected using proper weights for national results. Results were weighted using data from the 2011 Census from Statistics Canada.

Notes sur la collecte	Because of the high level of difficulty in reaching people aged between 18 to 34 years and visible minorities, Léger collaborated with its partner Research Now, a firm with a large panel of young respondents and with experience working with members of visible minorities.
